Franklin s Red Line Shown to Be the Right One I mean these remarks for the People of America. I may be told it is too late. If so, I shall reply, that it is never too late to tell the truth to a reasonable audience; and I hope the result in this case will bear out that opinion. Burke s Parliamentary Speeches. Introduction. The Boundary question had become matter of history. Diplomacy had done its work, in arguing and explaining it. The treaty of 1842 compromised what the treaties of 1783, 1794, 1815, and the award of the King of the Netherlands in 1831, had left unsettled. But scarcely had the two contracting nations ratified the final deed when the voice of discontent was raised, and doubts as to the construction of some portions, and dissatisfaction at the tenor of others, were heard in both hemispheres. Thus another important document attests, the almost unavoidable imperfections of those very acts, which require the clearest exercise of human wisdom. The particular branch of the treaty of Washington, to which the following pages have reference, is the North-Eastern Boundary between the United States and the British North American possessions. Almost every one has heard of the discovery of certain maps relating to that subject, only made known to the public since the ratification of the treaty by the President and Senate of the United States, and the Queen of Great Britain. The existence of these maps has been so made known by the publication in the Globe newspaper, at Washington, in December, 1842, of the speeches of Mr. Rives, chairman of...
